College Adds International Studies To Upgrade Campus Curriculum

Saint Joseph's College has approved the addition to its curriculum of a group major in international studies, it has been announced by Dr. Robert J. Garrity, vice-president for academic affairs.

"This group major, organized earlier last year, was the natural outgrowth of an international aspect of our Core curriculum of general education and of the personal commitments of a number of the college's faculty," Dr. Garrity explains.

"In a century when all people of the earth are becoming more and more aware of their interdependence, there is a great need for college graduates who are prepared to serve in careers in the international field and who have learned how to think perceptively and with sensitivity in terms of the global family of man," stresses Dr. John P. Nichols, coordinator of the Core curriculum.

Dr. Garrity terms the group major in international studies potentially a good preparation for careers with the federal government (more than 30 agencies), the foreign service, public international organizations, banking and business, consulting firms, research organizations, teaching, trade and professional associations, the media, foundations and other private non-profit groups.

"This program was designed following careful study of the competencies which a graduate entering a career in the international field should have," Dr. Garrity points out.

Dr. Nichols, originator of the idea for this group major, says the program provides the student with an opportunity to develop varied traits and skills, including these: a sense of the dignity of the human person, clarity on personal and cultural values, proficiency in speaking and writing, the ability to organize thoughts and introduce timely arguments, basic skills in economic and political analysis, a conceptual grasp of history and contemporary events, and knowledge of foreign people, languages and institutions.

Requirements for graduation are 45 hours in the Core curriculum, 54 hours in the group major and 21 hours of electives. The 54 hours in the group major are to be selected in this manner: 24 hours in what is

Alumni Resource Book Interests Many Schools

The alumni resource book has attracted the interest of other colleges and universities. The Chronicle of Higher Education, a weekly newspaper for college faculty and administrators, printed a brief description of this project.

Over 80 college and university officials have requested more information on the information-gathering system and on the response from the alumni. Comments have included, "Alumni are certainly an excellent resource for the reality testing of potential career choices (Fordham University)." "We would like more information about your alumni resource book and how you use it as we are setting up a similar system (Radcliffe College)." "I feel this is a great way of getting alumni more involved with college activities and its new students (Spring Garden College)."

Future plans for the alumni resource book include a wider distribution of this information to present and prospective students. A special thanks goes to the 60 alumni who have returned these job-related questionnaires.

Any alumnus who wishes to receive this inventory (and stamped, return envelope) should contact: Beth Pellicciotti, Guidance & Placement, Saint Joseph's College.

termed the "systems component" and 15 hours each in the "values component" and "areas component."

The systems component includes courses in earth science, economics, political science, psychology and sociology. Courses in philosophy and religion are included in the values component while the areas component offers courses in history and English.

Students will be able to enroll in the international studies major beginning with September, 1978.

Three Clubs Added To Extracurricular Roster

Extracurricular clubs and organizations at Saint Joseph's College have long played an important role in campus life, and the roster of clubs has grown during the current school year with the addition of the English club, economics club, and ski club.

Jean Anderson, junior English major from Fort Wayne, Ind., joined efforts with Father Lawrence Wyen, assistant professor of English, to start the English club.

"Students interested in various literary areas are encouraged to join our club, and we are planning a series of pertinent activities," reports Miss Anderson. "We plan to see several plays at the Purdue University theatre, such as 'Cabaret' and 'Hot L Baltimore' and we hope to bring in guest speakers who have written and published books and/or short stories."

For students interested in business and economics, the answer may be the economics club. Sue Donohue, junior accounting major from South Bend, Ind., launched the club earlier this year with the support of moderator Dr. Sandra Odorzynski, assistant professor of economics.

This club plans to obtain films for the group's viewing, plus guest speakers in the field of economics. A field trip to the federal reserve in Chicago also is on the club's agenda.

Dennis Brennan, sophomore electrical engineering major from Fowler, Ind., launched the ski club on basis of expanding student interest.

Weekend ski trips planned include excursions to Alpine Valley Ski Resort in Wisconsin and Wilmot Ski Resort in northern Illinois.

Dear Saint Joe Alumni and Alumnae,

I've had many conversations with alumni of Saint Joe's about the state of the college, its finances, its prospects for the future, its academic program and many other topics. Almost invariably, however, the conversation and the questions turn to the topic of students. Who are they? How are they? What are they like? Have they changed since I was there? Do they still live in Drexel? What effect has going co-ed had on campus life? (This question in particular dates a lot of us.) And on and on about students.

My answers to these questions are usually as unequivocal as, "Well, in many ways they're just like we were, and in several ways they're quite different." Of course generalizations break down, but how else does one talk about 1050 human beings?

The Alumni Board officers recently met with a group of student leaders with the express purpose of learning more about students from students. We had already heard much about them from administrators and faculty and members of the local community, and now it was to be the students' turn. In an atmosphere which, admittedly, warmed from something of an awkward, casual acquaintance to a pretty straight-forward, trusting exchange of thoughts, our group of students and once-students moved from marijuana to professor competency, from "quiet" floors in dormitories to tuition costs, from what's wrong with Saint Joe's to what's right about the place. The time passed quickly, nothing was really resolved, no big problems tackled, except for one grand, heart-warming discovery: the Saint Joe spirit that touched all of our lives at one time or another is still alive and well!

I'm not sure how it has survived or who's responsible, but the Saint Joe student is still a hard-working, hard-playing, non-pretentious, honest and caring person. Before that evening, I had thought I remembered quite well what it was that had made Saint Joe's so special to us, but to see it and hear it again up close was exciting.

If your memories, like mine, are getting a little harder to focus these days and you want to be uplifted, go back to Saint Joe's and visit these young people, listen to them, challenge them, question them. I know you'll like what you see and hear. And then, when someone like me asks you to think about or do something for our college, you'll have the best reason in the world to do so--the students.

Sincerely,

Dale W. Fallat

Crowley Named To Hall Of Fame Feb. 25

Tom Crowley, one of the 1960's top two-sport athletes at Saint Joseph's College, will be inducted into the SJC Sports Hall of Fame Feb. 25.

A 1966 alumnus with a bachelor's degree in accounting, Crowley starred in basketball as a guard and in baseball as an infielder-catcher for the Pumas.

Following his graduation, Crowley served Saint Joseph's faculty as an instructor, then assistant professor of accounting during 1968-76. As a college administrator, he served as vice-president for business affairs during 1974-76.

In June, 1976, he joined Edward J. Funk & Sons of Kentland, Ind., as controller.

Looking back on his college career, Crowley has no trouble singling out his top thrill as a Saint Joe athlete.

That moment came Jan. 27, 1965, when he scored 18 points, including the game-winning basket, with four seconds to play in a monumental 61-59 upset of defending NCAA champion Cincinnati.

"I have absolutely no regrets about the fact that almost all of my time at Saint Joseph's was devoted to either academics or athletics," Crowley says. "I took both of these items seriously. During my years on Saint Joe teams, we played against many great teams and great players, and I always found this to be very thrilling, rewarding and fulfilling."

Crowley owned the distinction of being the captain of the basketball team in his junior and senior years, as well as baseball captain as a senior. In addition, he was most valuable player in both sports during his junior year.

In basketball, Crowley played in 71 games for the Pumas. He scored 1074 career points to rank tenth on the list of all-time leading SJC scorers and his .748 (262 of 350) free throw accuracy rating is one of the highest among all Puma cagers. His per-game scoring average of 15.2 is 12th highest in Saint Joe history.

In baseball, he played second base and shortstop, then was switched to catcher to fill a void created by an injury to the regular receiver. He responded with his finest diamond season: 29 hits, 18 runs scored, 15 runs batted in, six doubles, eight stolen bases and a .350 batting average.

As a senior, he won all-Indiana Collegiate Conference honors as a catcher, just two months after he was an honorable mention selection to the league's all-star basketball team.

CHARLES ROARKS

Saint Joseph's, co-champions with Butler of the Indiana Collegiate Conference football race for 1977, have landed four players on the league's all-star first teams: split end Duwayne Mill, offensive tackle Steve Gedney, middleguard Charles Roarks and defensive back John Zaworski.

In addition, the Pumas dominated second-team selections on both offense and defense. Offensive selections were guard Mike Krasowski, center Jim Murphy, halfback Larry Shelton and flanker Mike Palmore.

Mike Bettinger Named Academic All-American

Mike Bettinger, sophomore defensive back for Saint Joseph's football Pumas, has been named to the first-team defense of the 1977 college division football academic All-American team.

An elementary education major who has achieved a perfect 4.0 index through the first three semesters of his college career, he is one of five players named to the team who have compiled a perfect 4.0 GPA. The 26th annual academic All-American team was selected by a vote of sports information directors at schools across the nation.

MIKE BETTINGER

He won a starting job early in the 1977 pre-season and finished with 33 solo tackles and 16 assists in nine games. He also recovered one fumble and had one punt return for four yards. In addition, he was chosen as a second team All-Indiana Collegiate Conference defensive back.

Bettinger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bettinger of 801 Stoneybrook, Dayton, Ohio, and is a 1976 graduate of Arrowhead High School (Hartland, Wis.).

He is a member of the campus Pastoral Council and is the 1977-78 Ecumenism Chairperson of that organization.
